[origin: EP0646678A2] Prefabricated sanitary construction elements for attaching sanitary installations to the room wall are intended to form an aesthetically pleasing cladding and to be of a dimensionally and positionally stable design. Instead of a frame structure, use is made, according to the invention, of a three-dimensional structure which is produced from a foamed plastic, with inserted reinforcements and cavities made therein, and can be clamped on the room wall by means of anchor screws such that no buckling can take place; a specially designed spacer sleeve is provided for this purpose. <IMAGE>
