Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0659454A1] The invention relates to a ski equipped with a (running) sole provided with discontinuous striations (50, 60), which comprises a smooth or barely structured front part (5) and a highly structured rear part (6). The rear part (6) extends towards the rear in the direction of the rear contact line (11), from a transverse line (12) located between the midline (13) of the boot and a transverse line located at a distance (d) from the midline (13) of the boot, equal to 0.4 times the distance (D) separating the said line (13) from the front contact line (10). The invention relates more particularly to an alpine (downhill) ski, the ability of which in terms of gliding is thereby improved. <IMAGE>
