[origin: EP0672600A1] The machine has an alignment roller (88) fitted below the banknote holding surface (40) so that its circumferential face protrudes through a recess in the latter (40). The portion of the roller protruding through the recess is driven in the direction of the withdrawal and separating device. The alignment roller extends over the whole width of the banknotes. The alignment roller is made of weak elastic material with a high coefficient of friction and rotated by the rollers (34,36,38) of the withdrawal and separating device.
