Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0677635A1] The lock has a bolt (10) and bolt-drive which are connected with relatively little relative movement (9) sufficient for swivelling the handle to as to move the bolt into a non-tilt fastening position. The bolt-drive exerts pressure on the bolt against the force of a restoring spring (13). The restoring spring exerts pressure on the bolt or on a supporting protuberance (14) of the bolt is in the form of a tension or compression spring. The bolt's axis (15) is at right angles to the handle's pivot axis (16). The bolt has two shoulders (17) on each sides of the pivot axis.
