Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0682958A1] The device includes a stand (3) with a horizontal branch (4) at the top with a cable suspended from the end. The cable is mounted so it can rotate, and carries a golf ball on the lower end. A number of sensors within the stand detect the speed and angle at which the ball is struck by the golf club during a practice shot. From this, the distance travelled by the ball can be determined, for comparison with the reference trajectory which was intended. The mounting of the ball allows movement towards or away from the stand, as well as in the direction of swing.
