Abstract (en)

The retainer consists of a bush (1) with at least one clip (2) to receive pipes or cables. The bush has a series of lips (8) inside it which interact with the threads (5) of a screw (4) and a guide in the form of two lugs (11) which project inside the bush perpendicular to its lengthwise axis (X). The lugs have curved surfaces to interact with the outer surfaces of the screw and are situated in the same horizontal plane between two adjacent lips. The bush can be made from two parallel plates joined by cross-pieces with holes, and the lugs can be mounted on bars on the plates' inner surfaces.
