Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0699395A2] The disc (7) removing mechanism from bales of tobacco, or other pressed, fibrous materials uses a vertically movable blade (7) which, after finishing a separating cut, rests on a cutting anvil (11). After each cut the normally horizontal cutting anvil, or its parts, is swivelled or shifted for removing the separated discs from the separating position. Pref. the cutting anvil has a recess for the end of the cutting blade. Typically the entire cutting anvil is swivelled downwards. Part of the cutting anvil may be partly swivelled by a drive. Another drive may move the cutting anvil horizontally, at least partly.
