Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0699406A1] The invention relates to a combination of a mattress and a bed frame supporting said mattress, said bed frame comprising frame parts, which are adjustable about horizontal pivot pins extending transversely to the longitudinal direction of the bed frame. The mattress comprises a plurality of slats being secured near the bottom side of the mattress and extending at least substantially parallel to each other, transversely to the longitudinal direction of the mattress. The mattress is directly supported on the adjustable frame parts by means of the slats. Near the ends of the mattress means are provided by which the mattress is secured to the ends of the frame parts facing away from each other.
