Abstract (en)

The present invention pertains to a butt for rifles, including a main body and of a movable cheekpiece which is applied to the upper part of the said main body and is capable of both height and lateral displacements and positionings. The main body has a plate with two vertical holes. The cheekpiece has two stud bolts, which can be displaced in width and are intended to be inserted and to be locked in the holes. On the stud bolts are mounted spacer rings, which determine the height of the cheekpiece on the main body. <IMAGE>
