Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0712736A2] The book producing process involves sheets being carried together after folding a row to produce sheet blocks (11). They are transferred to a clamping device (9) which introduces a component of the glue binder and runs round it. The sheets, assembled on a carrying device for standing sheet blocks, are fed to a clamping device (8) consisting of clamping rods (10). The sheets are fed to the clamping device carried together standing on the fold, and with the open side in front. The clamped sheet blocks may be fed to the clamping device with the edges for processing or the book block edges facing it.
