Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0715128A2] The grill pan comprises a rectangular dish (1) with a raised peripheral edge (2) supporting a carrier rack (3, 4) for the food to be grilled, which is perforated so that the fat drops down into the dish, where it is protected from direct radiant heat by the rack. The carrier rack has at least 2 parts which can slide relative to one another and/or can be individually removed from the dish. Pref. both the rack parts are supported by the raised edge of the dish to allow their relative displacement.
