Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0721039A1] The bar is made in two or more sections, to which the member (4) is fixed in different positions at intervals in the lengthwise direction. The sections each have a row of holes (5), in which the member is detachably fixed via lugs on it. At their ends, the sections have mating locking recesses and protrusions, by which they are rigidly but detachably secured together. The member can be U-shaped where it fits onto the bar, which it encloses by lateral flanges. It can also have locking protrusions, by which it engages in an angular recess in the bar.
