Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0730836A1] The runner has an eyelet (2) on the underneath for hanging the curtain, and a slide head insertable through the longitudinal slit (19) into the curtain track (18). The slide head is connected above its groove (12) through support devices (9) on the end sides to supports (5), which when the runner is inserted, engage through the slit (19) in the track (18) and are connected to the eyelet. The head may be swivel-connected to the support devices. The head can have two jaws (13) elastically movable across the longitudinal direction. When the runner is inserted in the slit the jaws can rest on the inside of the track sections (20,21) defining the longitudinal slit.
