Abstract (en)

[origin: WO9518429A1] In a miniature bank (1) with a strongroom (3) and an automatic device for dispensing money (4), setting up in the open air - which takes account of the technical security requirements of the credit institute - is made possible by way of the feature that parts of the miniature bank (1), in particular the strongroom (3), are secured on all sides against the attacks, that are to be expected, by means of a security element (5A; 5B) made from a material which is largely insensitive to manipulations, preferably, steel (5B) or ferro-concrete (5A), whereby in order to set up the miniature bank (1) in the open air, the security element (5A; 5B) is secured against movement by means of an anchoring element (2) and at least the parts of the miniature bank (1) that are exposed to the weather are protected on all sides against the effects of weather which arise - and preferably the client, too - by means of a weather protection element (6).
