Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0766935A1] The hair grip consists of two hinged branches (1,2) which are joined together at one end by a hinge (11,12). At the other end, there is an opening clip which allows the branches to separate or be fixed together. Each branch has a series of curved teeth (17,18). When the branches are closed together the teeth on one branch pass between those on the other and hold a lock of hair between them. The curved teeth are attached to each of the branches at a tangent. Each tooth's curve covers an angle of between 45 and 90 deg., pref. 60 deg. The middle teeth are longer than the end ones. Alternatively, the hinge of the hair grip can be spring-loaded so that the two branches are automatically pressed together.
