Abstract (en)

A method for manufacturing innerboots, particularly for sports shoes, composed of an upper (1) and of a sole (7) made of thermoplastic materials, which entails the steps of: cutting the upper on a flat plane and then perimetrically paring it down, pressing the upper and the sole along the perimeter, and perimetrically sewing the upper to the sole so as to form the innerboot (10), which is then turned inside out and heated so as to embed the seam inside it. <IMAGE>
