Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0792968A2] The frog point tip (12) has an element (20) passing through it, which is loaded in direction of the base (18), eg. slide plate, to hold-down the tip. The element is liftable and turnable within the aperture (22) in the tip, for adjustment of the tip. The element passes through the tip and through wing rails (14,16) on either side of the tip. The element projects from a holder (28), partially located under the rails. The holder is supported via plate springs (52,54) on the wing rail feet (44,46). An adjuster acts on the holder, to lift the element.
