Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0799963A1] The equipment fastens a window insert into a frame, which has a stop edge projecting from at least part of its inner perimeter. At least one spring (1) can be fastened to a hole on the inside of the frame, and has a surface (6) along which the insert can slide, so that it is moved from its projecting, untensioned position, and into a depressed, tensioned position. On reaching a locking position, at least part of the tension in the spring is released, and it engages in a profile or a recess in the insert. The spring has a claw which is formed along with it in one piece, and which is used for fastening.
