Abstract (en)

[origin: DE19503520C1] A web of textile material (1), for example a carpet web, is provided with a patterning agent and with a thickening agent, then steamed in a steamer (3). The residues of thickening agent that remain on the textile web (1) are at least partially removed by mechanical means, purified and discoloured, so that a practically pure thickening agent remains that may be reused for preparing a new batch of patterning agent in the batching tank (18).
