Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0806156A1] A machine for a shoemaking operation, especially for fixing the upper to the insole, in which suitable mechanical members (12-16) position on a support (11) a shoemaker's last (A) to which is attached the insole (B) and over which is laid the upper (C), grip and stretch the upper (C), clamp the last (A) on the support (11), and fold the upper (C) onto the insole (B) in order to fix the upper to the insole, is also provided with transferring and conveying members (17-21) underneath the support (11), into which the last (A) is discharged under gravity after having been released, and by which the last (A) is passed on for the succeeding operations. This enables the operator to perform the task without the risk of accidents, at high speed, and without damaging the footwear. <IMAGE>
