A game board comprises; a table board (1); body parts (8); extrusive bodies (16); hollow catching bodies (22) each of which is made in the shape of an animal's head or the like pivotally mounted to the front end of each of the extrusive bodies (16) and has an open bottom part contacting a wall surface of the table board (1); driving plates (26) each of which is put in a loose-fit so as to be reciprocatingly shiftable between the front endside and the rear end side of each of the extrusive bodies (16); projections (29) each of which works so as to push up each of the catching bodies (22) from the table board (1); levers (31) each of which works so that an end thereof engaging with each of the driving plates (26) may push, via each of the driving plates (26), each of the extrusive bodies (16) out of each of the body parts (8) when a projecting end of each of the levers (31) is pulled; and springs (35) each of which energises each of the levers (31) so that the lever's end engaging with each of the driving plates (26) may draw, via each of the driving plates (26), each of the extrusive bodies (16) up to its original position when the projecting end of each of the levers (31) is released, characterised in that the game board (1) is equipped with booty forwarding levers (40) which forward booties (38) to be caught by catching bodies (22) into a table board (1) when levers (31) are operated and interlocking mechanisms (A) each of which causes each of the booty forwarding levers (40) to be driven once every time each of the levers (31) is operated a plurality of times. <IMAGE>
