Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0847036A1] The billboard (1) has gaps (2) on its front side, in which information elements can be inserted. The gaps are bounded on both sides by surfaces which are undercut in order to form grooves (9), in which the side ends of the elements engage. The breadth (B9) of the grooves corresponds roughly with the thickness of the elements, or with that of their side ends when the latter are removed. The upper surface which bounds the gaps may have at least one recess, which allows an element to be gripped for easy removal, and whose depth (T2) corresponds roughly with the depth of the element.
