Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0860185A1] The game has a target which is a flat inclined support (3). Its upper surface has rods (28,29) fixed to it to define circular cells (9,10) into which the balls (1) are thrown. The cells are in concentric circles (13,14,15) which are numbered. The length of the diameter of each cell is greater than the diameter of a ball. The height of the rods is nearly the diameter of a ball except for the central cell (10) where they are lower. The surface of the support can be covered by a layer of shock absorber material.
