Abstract (en)
Container for beverages, preserved food and the like, comprising a tubular body arranged in the internal portion of the lid and which, when opening the container, emerges to the outside and enables the product contained to come out without contacting the external portion of the container, said tubular body extending in the form of a continuous sheet which is made integral by its perimetric edge with the internal face of the lid along a closed line arranged between the weakening line of the lid and the flange of the container. The tubular body is closed at its extremity by means of a membrane. The tear-off part of the lid, delimited by the weakening line, incorporates a folding line in order to fold upon itself when the tear-off part of the lid opens the container. <IMAGE>
