Abstract (en)

The invention relates to a device for displaying objects, which device comprises two upright walls made of cardboard and supports extending between said walls. The supports are made of cardboard, and they are provided at their ends with coupling elements which are likewise made of cardboard, by means of which the supports can be connected to the upright walls. The coupling elements may have an L-shaped section. One leg of a coupling element is attached to an end of the support in that case. A leg of the coupling element extending beyond the end of the support will extend at least substantially perpendicularly to the longitudinal direction of the support. <IMAGE>
