Abstract (en)
The boundary stone comprises an elongated body which is flat on one side and curved on the other, and in cross section in the form of a circle segment. The narrow sides (15-18) of the body between the two main sides (14,10) are formed at right angles to the flat main side (14). One end side (20) of a tapering end section (12) is smaller than the cross sectional face of the centre region. An upper end side (21) semicircularly extends from one narrow side to the other.
