Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0890940A1] The frame (1) is made in two sections (2d,2g) which can pivot about a central vertical axis so they can occupy two different positions, one at an angle to one another for fitting the fabric layer and a second in a straight line for stretching it. The fabric is in the form of a cover with end pouches (91,92) to engage with the frame sections when they are set at an angle to one another, each frame section having a curved member (27) at its end to give the fabric cover a predetermined shape when stretched. The frame sections also have locking members to retain them in the deployed position and can incorporate light or sound systems.
