Abstract (en)
The ladder has two stiles (1,2) and rungs (3) with each stile (1) having at the top a support member (S) and further articulated joint (7). The support member can be swivelled and locked relative to the stiles and the flat or linear support part of the support member extends transversely to the stiles. The support member can be connected to the pair of stiles by one or two articulated joints which run parallel to the rungs. The articulated joints can be locked separately.
