Abstract (en)
[origin: DE19738933C1] The lock (20) encloses the space (30) in which the implement is accommodated, and slides in guides (40,52). The guides extend in the travel direction of the implement, to accommodate part of it at least in guides at the side of the container, which run close to the engagement position (24) of the device. These parts of the guide can be formed in a plate (50) forming a working and supporting surface. The guides can be contained in a chamber (502) below the working surface. Two side-sections can be provided, incorporating guides in which the lock works.
