Abstract (en)

[origin: DE19738504C1] The door has an at least partially transparent door panel. A first receiver has at least one opening to receive the door panel and a second receiver has at least one receiving groove having an opening to receive the door panel. The openings of both receivers have a minimal insertion space smaller than the gauge of the door panel. The door panel is insertable in the first receiver for at least the minimal insertion direction. The door panel fits into the first receiver for at least the minimal length and is held by the return force of the return drive in the receiving groove with a second receiving pressure.
