Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0911456A2] Hook-like anchorage fittings (13) are positioned at the ridge-side end faces (12) of the rafters (5), to allow fastening of the roof panel (3) to the ridge purlin (6). The ridge purlin has an upwards-facing mounting for suspension of the anchorage fittings. Preferably the ridge purlin is a timber or prestressed concrete beam, with an angle iron on the top as mounting.
