Abstract (en)

[origin: WO9804803A1] Window covering with a venetian blind (1) and a curtain (2). The venetian blind (1) has horizontal slats (3) and is lowerable from a pulled-up configuration into a lowered configuration. In lowered condition, the curtain (2) covers at least a portion of the surface (8) of the lowered venetian blind (1). Provided between the venetian blind (1) and the curtain (2) are connections which are distributed over the surface (8) if the venetian blind (1) and the curtain (2) have been lowered. As these connections are designed as point connections (9), they can be manufactured in a simple manner. Further, detaching and restoring the point connections is readily possible, so that the curtain can easily be cleaned or replaced. As the curtain is connected to the venetian blind only at specific points, the cleaning of the venetian blind is easy as well.
