Abstract (en)

A device for adjusting the position of a quarter with respect to the shell of a sports shoe comprises a base element (4) with which at least one slider (7) is slidably associated and to which a tilting element (12), provided with an axial seat for a pawl (15), is pivoted. The tilting element is actuated by an eccentric element (36) which can in turn be activated by means of a knob (39) which can be operated by the user. There are also means for activating the eccentric element and for the selective interaction of the pawl with the shell. <IMAGE>
