Abstract (en)

The hand protector (2) consists of a sheet or panel of a supple or semi-supple material, especially rubber, designed to cover the palm of the hand and the base of the fingers. It has at least two slits (4) through it, two of which lie perpendicular to one another and parallel to the edges of the protector. When in use the slits enable the panel to take on a concave shape, forming curved tongues (5) which allow the oyster shell to be gripped firmly while being opened.

Abstract (fr)
