The device has a support (12) with handles, and is located on wheels (13,31). The wheels are located to be height adjustable individually or in pairs. The height adjustment is controlled by sensors. The wheels are located flush in the underside (12.1) of the support, so that they only project slightly below the underside. The wheels (13) are located on telescopic supports which are driven by hydraulic or electric means. The supports are located to be able to swing back towards the underside of the support.
