Abstract (en)

[origin: WO9943135A1] A portable telephone unit is proposed comprising a telephone housing and a microphone unit movable between a retracted rest position and an operating position protruding from the telephone housing movable in a path of movement over a distance of travel. In the portable telephone unit, a bistable mechanism cooperating with a microphone unit has spring means for pushing the microphone unit with spring force to the operating position, a component of the spring force exerted by the spring means changing direction after an intermediate unstable point has been passed, when the microphone unit is moved between the rest position and the operating position.
