Abstract (en)
The monitoring and planning device has a first calendar (1) divided into months and a second calendar (2) also divided into. The second calendar is superposed on the first with an offset corresponding to the oestral cycle of the animal. The second calendar is partly transparent so successive dates of the animals oestral cycle appear superposed. The first calendar is formed in columns (10-12) representing the months and rows (100-115) representing the days. Each month is divided into at least three columns (10A,10B,10C) of information showing the quarters of the month when an animal has been successfully inseminated, the fertile period and notes on the day. The second calendar. The second calendar is of similar construction.
