Abstract (en)

[origin: WO9857293A1] The invention relates to a method for archiving and utilising documents. According to the invention, a document is obtained as early as possible. A document image representing said document is then stored in an archive memory. At this point, the document image is filed and cannot be modified. A data record which can be modified is allocated to the document image in the archive memory. During a processing operation concerning the document, the document image is retrieved, and a processing remark denoting the processing operation taking place is added to the modifiable data record. Each time the document image is retrieved, a screen representation of at least part of the document image and a representation of the processing status of the document are produced, based on the modifiable data record.
