Abstract (en)
An ice skate runner holder comprising an elongated frame which has a front pedestal, a rear pedestal and a bridge portion therebetween. The bridge portion joins the front and rear pedestals thereby defining an intermediate opening in the runner holder. The frame also has an interface portion adapted to receive a blade runner; the bridge portion having a hollow tubular configuration which increases the torsional rigidity of the said runner holder. The runner holder may also comprise a resilient reinforcement member extending on the bridge portion to increase the resistance to deflection of the runner holder. <IMAGE>
