Abstract (en)

A method of operating a retail terminal includes the step of displaying a characteristic of an item in a first classification type. The method also includes the step of generating a change-type control signal when a user of the retail terminal operates an input device associated with the retail terminal so as to input a classification type selection. Moreover, the method includes the step of displaying the characteristic of the item in a second classification type in response to generation of the change-system control signal <IMAGE>
