Abstract (en)
[origin: FR2762366A1] The invention concerns a device for assembling at least two elements to be made integral forming between them a fixed non-straight angle characterised in that it comprises two opposing pieces (3 and 4), one (3) substantially concave designed to be pressed outside the angle formed by the elements (1 and 2) and the other (4) substantially convex designed to be pressed inside said angle. Said two pieces (3 and 4) are to be directly pressed against the elements to be assembled with an assembling member (5-26) at least to bring together said two parts (3 and 4) passing through a space (15) separating the edges of the elements (1 and 2) to be located parallel, so as to clamp said elements (1 and 2) between the two parts (3 and 4), without direct contact between them, to form a finished assembly capable of receiving an optional additional element (30).
