Abstract (en)

[origin: DE19808757A1] The invention relates to a method for producing detergent forms. According to said method, highly dosed fragrant compounds with apparent densities of more than 700 g/l are produced by granulation or pressure agglomeration and mixed with other powder-form and/or granular detergent constituents. These premixtures are then compacted into forms using a known method. The incorporation of the perfume according to the invention results in detergent forms which are characterised in that they are harder and in that they disintegrate more quickly than conventionally produced forms.
