Abstract (en)

[origin: WO0107720A1] The invention concerns a method wherein an infiltration drainage conduit is produced by using oblong water-permeable textile bags (11), which are filled with a light loose material (26), forming cavities capable of being run through by a flow, in particular cellular glass chunks, and which is placed in a trench (21). The base of the trench can be previously sealed with a watertight sheet or mat (23). The infiltration water flows through the cavities forming about 30 % of the total volume, between the cellular glass chunks.
