Abstract (en)

[origin: US2001025678A1] The invention relates to a pouch-like container, in particular billfold, pocketbook, wallet or the like, having insertion compartments which are arranged in a graduated manner one above the other and are intended for credit cards, cards of credit-card format and the like, the insertion compartments having at least one insertion and removal opening. The core of the invention resides in the fact that the direction for pushing into the insertion compartments, and for removal therefrom, and the main axis of the graduation are arranged transversely to one another.
