Abstract (en)
[origin: WO0141889A1] The invention concerns a device for a game of chance wherein the final objective is similar to a game of dice or roulette. It consists of an upper chamber (1) for mixing identified balls (2) which can be inserted through a receiving orifice (4). The chamber (1) is closed with a closure element (2) to facilitate the process of mixing the balls and opened by simply releasing the device, which set upside down on a horizontal plane xx', turns over by the combined action of its covering shape (6) and its ballast (7) thereby allowing the balls to be inserted in the reception chamber (4) to be positioned in the marked (9) cells (8) of a tray. The inventive device is particularly designed to be incorporated in any game usually comprising various dice, or particular Casino games, such as roulette, boule, associated with a betting table, or games where co-ordinates of points have to be defined.
