Abstract (en)
[origin: WO0177916A2] A system (100) and method has been developed which provides information, for display on a computer device (105) operatively connected to a network (110), relating to a plurality of countries. In response to a selected country, information is then provided for display relating to goods and services offered for purchase. This information, however, is provided for display in a language associated with the selected country. Thereafter, a request to purchase the selected good or service can easily be received by a user after viewing a display in the language associated with a selected country. More preferably, pricing information is also provided for display in a currency associated with the selected country. Thus, a consumer can easily understand what goods or services are being offered for purchase, and the cost of these goods or services, since the currency is that associated with a selected country of the consumer. Accordingly, multi-country purchasing is made easier for the consumer.
