Abstract (en)
[origin: EP1205614A2] The building has a foundation, at least one storey with rooms divided by walls (16,18) and a roof. The rooms are formed by modules, selectively built onto the walls of adjacent modules. In each storey, a floor plate (22) is built, which coincides in shape and size with the ground plan of an end structural stage of the building and which is connected with all other floor plates by through, supporting columns (24). The foundation and/or the floor plate, for later enlargement of its base surface, has connecting components for the connection of further foundation plates. The roof with its projected design dimensions corresponds with the maximum dimensions of the end structural stage. The modules can be formed from all customary building materials.
