Abstract (en)
[origin: WO0128645A1] Game-cards which have an image, graphic, or information on one side, with a section, perhaps in the centre, replaced by a corresponding section from another game-card. Around one side of the replaced section is a cut, which created a flange or tab projecting in one direction, but remaining attached to the game-card at one side. When this flange is slid from beneath a similar game-card, over a similar flange or tab, cut in the opposite side of the replaced section in another image, it may complete the image on the top game-card; simultaneously, as the underside of the flange on the top card replaces the lost section on the lower surface of the lower game-card, it too may complete the graphic or information on that side.
