Abstract (en)

[origin: WO0133465A2] A system for managing risk transactions includes an Internet web server in communication with risk customers and insurers. The web server accepts requests for quotes from customers and markets them to insurers. The insurers compete to offer the most favorable quote to the customer taking into consideration various factors, including premiums and service. The competition can include online negotiation sessions between the parties. The customer can be advised online by an advisor.
