Abstract (en)

[origin: WO0167346A2] A system and method of job management that enables the efficient completion of a series of tasks, of management of financial transactions by improving the draw process, and/or provision of materials based on orders received from customers, each while using at least one wireless device. In a preferred mode, those using these systems and methods manage the workflow, finances, and supplies of specific jobs such as construction in a cost-effective manner by scheduling tasks and delivery of materials and monitoring the progress of jobs through a variety of job reports in a preferred embodiment. The system may reside on at least one server that is accessible through standard Internet browsers and remotely via wireless Web-access devices, enabling workflow management directly from at least one job site.
